"Candidates don't realise that their video/telephone interviewer might've never worked in a bank." "Some investment banking teams have never hired a graduate externally." "Finance firms want to hire caterpillars: candidates who are outwardly agreeable and cooperative under authority early in their careers, but who, over the years, have the potential for metamorphosis into MDs and future leaders in the firm. A passive leader-in-disguise is the psychology of the perfect hire. "The world is littered with the bones of failed finance wanna-bes. Every year, between June and September, investment firms and consultancies open their doors to new graduates and interns. Thousands apply: students from Oxford to Staffordshire fantasise about working for the biggest, most competitive industries in the world. "Just imagine..." they think. "The 6-figure salary. Views of Canary Wharf. A bright, blue suit to wear every day." A handful receive offers. The remaining 99.9% stare blank-faced at their rejection emails -- no interviews, no application feedback, just an overly-polite "Thank You For Your Interest" generated by a computer. "I never wanted to work in finance anyway," they tell friends and family, eventually accepting a £20k job and working on less money for the next decade than a 19-year-old banking intern. As a student, I received front-office offers from the biggest investment banks in the world. Throughout my Undergraduate and Master's degrees, I interned (3-months each time) in the Big 4, a New York hedge fund and the world's biggest investment manager.

That meant suffering through application processes THREE TIMES over. Believe me, I've interviewed everywhere. I also worked part-time in recruitment -- so remember those assessment centres and video interviews you've heard about, well I helped run them! Contained in this book is the knowledge to transform you into a top candidate for finance (IB, AM, S&T, Big4) roles. I've read similar ebooks on Amazon: what I've seen in other publications is generic, misleading, and somewhat out-of-date. It's either written by people who never broke into the industry themselves, or 40-year-old Managing Directors who applied to banking decades ago, in a very different time. I offer: An insight into how finance interviews work: how they're "scored" (yes, interviewers "score" you), how final decisions/offers are made (not even bankers outside of HR know some of this stuff). A specific overview of what finance interviewers are TRAINED to look for in candidates. It ain't just big smiles and silver spoons: there are guidelines written down, not unlike the criteria for marking a university essay. If you don't meet the spec, that's a minimum requirement you've failed. Poor and excellent examples of answers to real banking interview questions. An extensively detailed explanation of how people FAIL to land even a single internship grad/job. Up-to-date knowledge from the past 5 years. No guarantee of an internship/job after reading this book. That said, I'm confident this will skyrocket your chances.

I was a economics major with almost no real job experience, and it must have shown in my interviews. I got lucky because UBS was willing to take a chance on me as a summer intern, which led me to get where I am now. If I could do it again, though, I would take the much easier route and read this book. It would have prepared me for the parts of the job I never imagined." - First Year Analyst At Citigroup "Applying for my summer internship was a rough experience- I was afraid that I would never get the chance to show my skill in investment research to big companies because I would be rejected before I ever made it to the internship stage. Fortunately for me, this book helped me prepare and build my interview skills to the point where I felt that I had not just a fair shot at the job but an unfair advantage over the other candidates. It's a must read." - Current Intern At Goldman Sachs

The Evidence-Based Internship is a unique teaching and learning tool that combines an internship manual with a text on evidence-based practice. Designed for students entering their field placements in social work and criminal justice--which often overlap--it is built on the premise that students, agencies, and field instructors should be able to provide clients with the best, evidenced-based practice methods currently available. Giving students the confidence to begin their field assignment, it is filled with useful strategies for successfully navigating the internship and honing the skills necessary to become accountable practitioners. Worksheets, checklists, and in-depth case scenarios illustrate legal and ethical issues, interview and assessment skills, techniques for gathering evidence for a variety of problems in mental health and corrections settings, and preparing an employment portfolio. This is one field manual that students will find useful long after they have completed their internship. Each part of the book explores a different phase of the internship, from the first days through job applications and interviews. Helpful and pragmatic tools are included throughout, such as evaluation tools, best practice guidelines, and sample forms. Online resources are also available to complement the book and include reproducible material from the book, videos students can use to practice their interviewing skills, and links to helpful resources.
