gratitude is central to the journal and a simple introduction to the concept encourages children to reflect on three positives of their day. Growth mindset : The journal encourages a growth mindset through checklist prompts and use of daily quotes to remind children about the importance of not giving up when faced with challenges. Kindness : The journal encourages this in a number of simple ways through random acts of kindness, reflecting on who they were kind to (or who was kind to them) and prompts them to help others in a variety of different of ways. wellbeing : Time spent using the journal is an analogue antidote to screen time.

Children are becoming increasingly distracted by social media and online games, activities that are proven to contribute to stress and other mental-health problems. The journal encourages family dialogue on this topic through numerous prompts for screen-free activities. Self-awareness : Cultivating self-awareness and allowing children to show true emotions is therefore beneficial. The journal supports this in a number of ways by prompting children to think about their
