Guided by social-ecological perspectives, the premise of this research was that risk pathways for these behaviors emerge via interactions between individual characteristics and environmental factors. The research the prevalence and psychosocial correlates of NSSI. A second objective was to identify risk factors for suicide ideation among those with NSSI history. Results showed that about 7.8% of the sample reported engaging in NSSI. Logistic

research indicates that in the context of

While suicide is the third largest killer of adolescents, most suicide attempts do
not result in death.

Therefore the treatment of the
