Part of the popular Famous series, Famous Dolls celebrates dolls in film, TV, cartoons, books, comics and comic strips, as well as toys such as Hamble in Playschool. It also explores the world of celebrity dolls including stars such as Shirley Temple and Mae West. pop star dolls including Michael Jackson and Cher, and dolls representing royalty. Written by leading doll expert, Susan Brewer, the author of British Dolls in the 1950s and British Dolls in the 1960s, the book starts with a series of essays setting dolls in context and exploring their role in popular culture. The main part of the book is an impressive A-Z of famous dolls, with symbols to show in which field they became famous (e.g. cartoons, toys or comic strips). The stories behind each of the dolls are told, including the tragic tale of Raggedy Ann and how a little girl inspired one of the most iconic character dolls of all time. A must-buy book for everyone who has ever own or collected dolls or is interested in popular culture. Did you know? - The author of Raggedy Ann, Johnny Gruelle, was a vehement anti-vaccination campaigner after his young daughter died when she was vaccinated at school without his consent - Angela Rippon created the Victoria Plum doll series based on a plum tree in her garden - Holly Hobbie is an author and illustrator who named the famous patchwork-wearing little girl after her. It became a popular doll in the 1970s

Join the world-famous Betty & Veronica for some fabulous fun and fantastic fashion in this comics double digest featuring an ALL NEW LEAD STORY! In “ Give My Regards to Brigitte, ” songstress Brigitte Reilly makes her Broadway debut—but a rude Veronica in the audience creates a scene that will be tough for Brigitte to overcome!

Betty Lee, Junior Betty Lee, junior, was now almost sixteen and attractive. There would be problems of love affairs some time, but not yet. It was to be hoped, though Betty was mature for her age and had considered herself as “ going on sixteen ” ever since her last birthday. Betty ’ s dreams of a Prince Charming were natural enough but not serious and never connected with anyone in the flesh, unless a thrilling memory of one Hallowe ’ en and of attention from a college youth on a later occasion could be considered as coming in the category of dreams.
Chet Dorance had recovered from his first attack of being impressed with a girl and was less “ obvious ” in his attentions to Betty. But he still preferred her society when he could get it, for picnics, class parties and the like, seeing her home or arranging for her company. Betty in her turn, had confidence in Chet, who was always the gentleman, and felt safely escorted when she was with him. There was nothing “ thrilling ” about the friendship and the girls rarely teased Betty about Chet. Very little of what could properly be termed social life was permitted by any of the parents who were the safe background of Betty and her friends. Contacts were chiefly at school and in school activities, all very natural and pleasant. Another boy for whom Betty felt a real friendliness was Chauncey Allen, Kathryn ’ s brother. Chauncey had taken a sudden upward growth till Kathryn looked like a little girl beside him and her vivacious ways were in contrast with his quiet though often droll speech and action. He was active enough, to be sure, and was to play with the basketball team after Christmas. From him, since she and Kathryn were together so much, Betty heard all the boy news of the school, but Chauncey rarely engaged her society for any event. Indeed, Chauncey rarely bothered about girls, though he liked Betty, Kathryn said that since Chet fancied Betty, Chauncey would “ let it go at that. ”

"My Father's Betrayal," Part One. The latest 'new look' saga is the most poignant yet, as Veronica and her friends vow to save a nature preserve from being turned into an industrial park. The issue isn't as black and white as the teens may think: not only will the industrial park bring much-needed jobs to the out-of-work residents of Riverdale, it will also help lower property taxes. But the biggest conflict of all: the industrial park is being funded by Veronica's father! What will life in Riverdale be like when its richest businessman and his debutante daughter disagree on an issue that can affect the whole community? It's the story you just can't afford to miss, served up in the "realistic" art style that made Betsy and Veronica's "Bad Boy Trouble," "Jughead's "Matchmakers," and Moose and Midge's "Breakup Blues" some of the most talked-about Archie stories in recent years! Then, in Mike Pellowaki and Tim Kennedy's "Sitting Downer," it's "Friendship Day" at the local library, and Betty has volunteered to read the children a story all about the topic. But when Veronica and Archie show up, the kids get a lesson in jealousy instead! PLUS: Other new and classic tales!

"Oh, this indigent family of ours! I certainly must bestir myself and do something to support it," said Betty Baird, airily, to her mother, yet looking determined, and straightening herself up among the cushions piled high on the broad window-seat in her room." Betty is back home with her parents on Long Islands, when she discovers her father is struggling to pay back the mortgage. She decides to help. But can a young girl in 1907 earn enough money to make a difference? And does Betty have the spirit and determination to stick with her plans, even when others try to discourage her? The audiobook version of this novel is narrated by Holly Jensen, the author great grand niece. Anna Hamlin Weikel (1864-?) was an American author from Pennsylvania. She who wrote under the pen name Anna Hamlin Weikel. She was married to Henry Wikel, a private school teacher. She made books her career and is mostly remembered today for her "Betty Baird" children's book series. The character of Betty's father in these novels was inspired by her own father, the clergyman Benjamin Hamlin.

The Dollhouse Murders (35th Anniversary Edition)

Originally published in 1949, this quaintly charming, colorful, double-cover paper doll book has been reprinted by Paper Studio Press. Four adorable stand-up dolls have a wardrobe of sixteen old-fashioned outfits awash with ruffles, ribbons, buttons and bows, all in shades of pink and blue. Many of the frou-frou frocks feature wrap-around skirts that add dimension. This retro-vintage collectible paper doll book is a nostalgic reminder of sweet by-gone times when little girls had storybook daydreams instead of smart phones.

Christmas is coming, and six-year-old Esther knows how much her little sister, Betty Rae, would love to have a doll. It is 1932, at the depth of the great depression, and Daddy has lost his job. Buying a doll is out of the question. Mother offers to help Esther make a rag doll. Esther doesn’t want help. She has to make it all by herself, so the present will be just from her. With Mother’s guidance, and a great deal of excitement, Esther works every day on the doll, while Betty Rae is napping. It takes a lot of hard work. Can she finish in time - completely finish? Esther and Betty Rae are also involved in the Sunday School Christmas pageant. It is lovely, but they see that all the most important parts are assigned to older children. What can be done about that disappointment? The sisters come up with a plan. On Christmas day Esther receives an unexpected delightfu gift, but nothing can compare with the thrill of watching Betty Rae unwrap that very special present - the doll!

Losing the only home, that Elaine Morgan had ever known, left the young woman confused as to what to do next. Her only living relative, that she was aware of, was her father’s brother who lived in Texas. Elaine had no way of contacting him. With only one week to vacate the property, she accepted the position of caring for nine year old, Nancy Farley. Although the girl was a challenge, her father was an even greater one. Bitter, since his wife had walked out and left him with a blind child, eight years ago, Chase Farley did not welcome Elaine into his home. His pa, Howard Farley, brought Elaine home, one day informing Chase that she had nowhere else to go and that Nancy needed a woman’s guidance. Chase did not try to hide the fact that he had no use for women. With help from the Lord, Elaine soon shows him that not all women are like his wife.

Hazel Pendley creates heirloom-quality quilts. Ed Ripley wraps bits of fur and feathers into trout flies the size of gnats. Edna Hartong still makes an item that has all but disappeared from the American scene: lye soap. All of these people, and many more like them, are Appalachians who work with their hands. Journalist Sam Venable and photographer Paul Efrid spent four years combing the hills and hollows of Southern Appalachia to find these talented individuals and let them talk about their work. Mountain Hands is an intimate look at more than three dozen such craftspeople and their vocations. Venable and Efrid encountered folks who pursue popular crafts, such as basketweaving and clockmaking. But they found practitioners of other trades—wallpaper hangers and rail splitters, beekeepers and gravediggers—whose work also depends upon dexterity and upon expressing a distinctive Appalachian way of life. Some are college educated, some can barely read and write: some have lived in these hills all their lives, others have only recently come to call them home. Yet each feels bound to the region through a deep sense of belonging, and each owes at least part of his or her livelihood to handwork. While most of us may think of working with one’s hands as entering computer data, these individuals attest to the perseverance—and appeal—of more traditional ways. Mountain Hands is a celebration in words and photographs of gifted people who understand and appreciate the Appalachian heritage—and who live it every day. The Author: A fifth-generation southern Appalachian, Sam Venable is a newspaper columnist whose award-winning observations on daily life appear four times a week in the Knoxville News-Sentinel. A graduate of the University of Tennessee, Venable has spent most of his career roaming the highlands of his home state. He and his wife, Mary Ann, also a Tennessee native and UT graduate, live in a log house atop a wooded ridge on the outskirts of Knoxville. The Photographer: Paul Efrid is a native of Rome, Georgia. He holds a degree in biology from Shorter College but has spent his professional career as a news photographer. After working for two newspapers in Georgia, he moved to Tennessee in 1990 and became a staff photographer for the News-Sentinel. Efrid is an avid hiker, canoeist, and backpacker. He and his wife, Stephanie, live in Knoxville.

One of Hollywood’s best known stars, Betty Grable, was the subject of many paper doll books. This 1943 reproduction is a favorite among collectors. Lilly Harper is different than most young women her age. While other women are having babies she is making dolls. When her friends Tyler and Lucy are killed Lilly moves out to the farm to take care of their daughter and Lucy’s mama. Lilly uses the money she makes from selling her dolls to buy necessities until Tyler’s brother, Travis can be located. Travis Addison had not been home in six years when he felt a sudden urge to return. Expecting a joyous homecoming he was not prepared for what awaited him. Instead of his brother greeting him, he was met by a young woman, a niece, his brother’s mother-in-law, and a young Negro man. Suddenly, his joy turned to sorrow. But with this new family and strength from the Lord he soon realizes his sorrow has turned to joy.
