General. EC note: Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) 2016/1237; Commission Implementing Regulation (EU) 2016/1239 amended

Olive oil, and notably extra virgin olive oil, is considered as a food category at high risk of noncompliances and frauds, due to its high economic value compared to other food products. Conformity checks are the key tool to ascertain and ensure that marketing standards specifically designed for a product are effectively complied with on the EU market. At EU level, three main Regulations establish marketing standards for olive oil, and rules for the related conformity checks: Regulation (EU) No 1308/2013 of the European Parliament and the Council of 17 December 2013; Commission Implementing Regulation (EU) No 29/2012 of 13 January 2012; and Commission Regulation (EEC) No 2568/91 of 11 July 1991. These Regulations define, among others, olive oil characteristics and requirements for its marketing. In general, olive oils must be compliant with the quality and purity characteristics as defined in Annex I of Commission Regulation (EEC) No 2568/91, depending on the specific product category considered. Verification of compliance with such characteristics is determined through conformity checks performed by national competent authorities. According to Article 8(2) of Regulation (EEC) No 2568/91, Member States are required to notify to the European Commission on an annual basis the measures implementing the same Regulation. Regulation (EU) No 29/2012 lays down the marketing rules for olive oil, and regulates a number of aspects of the conformity checks system, including the sending and receiving of verification requests on infringements that concern at least two Member States. The Administrative Assistance and Cooperation (AAC) system is the main channel for sending and receiving verification requests to and from other Member States. Against this background, this study investigates how conformity checks in the olive oil sector are conducted at Member State level across the European Union. The study also aims at identifying and defining actions that are required to meet the objectives of the system of conformity checks, also taking into account the aims of the marketing standards in the olive oil sector. Finally, the study conclusions highlight the main identified problems and bottlenecks of the current system of conformity checks on olive oils, as well as the possible solutions to those problems and bottlenecks. The study is structured around three Themes and nine national case studies, carried out in both Member States that produce olive oils ("producing Member States") and Member States that rely exclusively on imports to meet their domestic demand for olive oils ("non-producing Member States"). Theme I focuses on the description of the olive oil sector and on the analysis of the current situation on conformity checks, as regulated at EU level and implemented in all EU28 Member States; a more detailed analysis is provided for the Member States covered by national case studies. Theme II focuses on the assessment of two key aspects: a) the extent to which the general objectives of the system of conformity checks are currently achieved; b) the identification of problems/gaps that prevent the achievement of such objectives at national level. The challenges of the conformity checks system and of the notification and verification processes are also investigated. Theme III focuses on: a) the identification of national specificities which can be considered as best practices for the development of an effective and efficient system of conformity checks; b) the elaboration of suggestions for improving the effectiveness and efficiency of the current approach to conformity checks, also including suggestions to ensure traceability and detect frauds in the olive oil sector and the identification of suitable approaches for the notification of non-compliances regarding olive oils to the European Commission.

This guide provides information on the application of the "Commission Implementing Regulation (EU) 2019/779 of 16 May 2019 laying down detailed provisions on a system of certification of entities in charge of maintenance of vehicles<sup>1</sup> pursuant to Directive (EU) 2016/798 of the European Parliament and of the Council and repealing Commission Regulation (EU) No 445/2011 [1]" as referred to in Article 14(6) and (8) of the Safety Directive. That regulation will be referred to in the present document as the "ECM Regulation". This guide aims at a correct and common understanding of the concepts of ECM developed in the ECM Regulation but does not contain any legally binding advice. It contains explanatory information of potential use to all actors<sup>2</sup> whose activities may have an impact on the safety of railway systems and who directly or indirectly need to apply the ECM Regulation. It may serve as a clarification tool without however dictating in any manner compulsory procedures to be followed and without establishing any legally binding practice. The guide provides explanations on the provisions contained in the ECM Regulation and should aid understanding of the approaches and rules described therein. This guide has been prepared by the European Union Agency for Railways (EUAR) with the support of Recognised Bodies and National Safety Authority experts. It represents a developed collection of information gathered by the Agency during internal meetings and meetings with ACBs (Accredited Certification Bodies), RCBs (Recognised Certification Bodies) and NSAs.

The Air Traffic Management (Regulation (EU) No 716/2014) (Amendment) Regulations 2022

The EU Single European Sky (SES) policy is a key pillar of the Community's aviation policy. SES should lead to an improvement of the performance of air traffic management in Europe, to the benefit of industry, environment, passengers and society at large. The EU Performance and Charging Schemes are an important instrument to realise this ambition. Both the performance and charging schemes share the objective to improve the performance of what is essentially a monopoly-driven industry without competitive/market forces. The performance scheme sets a framework for improving performance through a series of reference periods that successively identify new targets to be reached. The charging scheme aims to set a level and transparent playing field for charges and support the performance scheme through tools that encourage higher performance (charge modulation, incentives etc.). In the Better Regulation Package of the new Juncker Commission, there is a stronger emphasis on ex post evaluation in the policy cycle. This study is an application of that objective in the area of SES, by reviewing the effectiveness of the EU performance and charging schemes as defined in the Commission Implementing Regulation (EU) No 390/2013 laying down a performance scheme for air navigation services and network functions and Commission Implementing Regulation (EU) No Regulation 391/2013 laying down a common charging scheme for air navigation services. The Terms of Reference (ToR) states that the objective of the evaluation is twofold: - First, the objective is to evaluate the SES performance and charging schemes during the first reference period including the set-up of the Performance Review Body (PRB) and its support functions and compare this with the past arrangements. It is stated that the evaluation should also review the coherence and complementarity of other SES initiatives contributing to the achievements of performance targets. - Second, the study should assess the quality of raw data and the underlying data handling that is used for the purposes of the performance and charging schemes. In addition to the formal objectives of the study, the European Commission indicated during the kick-off meeting that the study should aim to provide lessons learned for the third reference period (RP3) preparations and planning. The scope of the study includes the first regulatory period, RP1, covering the period 2012-2014, as well as the results of the first year of the second reference period (RP2).

In the face of the current confusion about the use of arts 290 and 291 TFEU, there is need of further development of the theory of legislative delegation to the EU Commission. This timely book approaches this question from a practical perspective with a detailed examination of how the legislator uses delegated and implementing mandates in different fields of EU law. Offering an analysis of legislative practice and providing concrete evidence of how articles 290 and 291 TFEU are actually handled, it offers new insight into potential developments in EU administrative law.
