serves as a role model through strong intellect, physical presence, professional competence, and moral character. An Army leader is able and willing to act decisively, within superior leaders' intent and purpose, and in the organization's best interests. Army leaders recognize that organizations, built on mutual trust and confidence, accomplish missions. Every member of the Army, military or civilian, is part of a team and functions in the role of leader and subordinate. Being a good subordinate is part of being an effective leader. Leaders do not just lead subordinates-they also lead other leaders. Leaders are not limited to just those designated by

This pamphlet compiles and organizes selected international legal materials in a convenient form for reference purposes. The looseleaf format allows for updating as new international agreements are entered into force which supplement or supersede those presently included. Particular attention has been given to the selection of treaties and other agreements which will be of optimum value in the solution of the numerous and complex international problems which increasingly confront the Army. This volume includes defense treaties, status of forces agreements, and other
