his region. Michael met many influential people, such as ambassadors, heads of state, and the most famous being Princess Diana. Michael was able to use his influence in overcoming roadblocks to help several families to emigrate from Bosnia and giving local people much-needed jobs to support their families. Michael was the liaison between the United Nations and the United States Army who maintained three bases of operations in the northern region. Michael's one-year assignment with the United Nations would become the most fulfilling year in his law enforcement career, one that changed his life forever.

Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia in The Hague. Borger recounts how Ratko Mladić --now on trial in The Hague--and recently convicted Radovan Karadžić were finally tracked down, and describes the intrigue behind the arrest of Slobodan Milošević, the Yugoslav president who became the first head of state to stand before an international tribunal for crimes perpetrated in a time of war. Based on interviews with former special forces soldiers, intelligence officials, and investigators from a dozen countries--most speaking about their involvement for the first time--this book reconstructs a fourteen-year manhunt carried out almost entirely in secret. Indicting the worst war criminals that Europe had known since the Nazi era, the ICTY ultimately accounted for all 161 suspects on its wanted list, a feat never before achieved in political and military history.
