In our Western civilization, there are two influential accounts of beginnings. One is the biblical account, compiled more than two thousand years ago by Judean represent the best thinking of their times, and in this line-by-line annotation of the first eleven chapters of Genesis, Isaac Asimov carefully and evenhandedly compares the two accounts, pointing out where they are similar and where and if the biblical writers "had written those early chapters of Genesis knowing what we know today, we can be certain that they would have written it completely differently."

Isaac Asimov brings to this fascinating subject his wide-ranging knowledge of science and ability to explain the complex with accuracy, clarity, and wit.
