The 7(a) business loan program is the principal activity of the Small Business Administration (SBA) for providing financial assistance to small businesses. SBA makes loans to small businesses and guarantees loans made by others. In recent years, the program has emphasized guaranty loans whereby SBA guarantees the repayment of loans made to small businesses by private lending institutions. The major cause of dissatisfaction among business owners, lenders, and SBA personnel is that it takes too long to obtain a guaranty loan because of the number and complexity of the documents required to apply for a loan, and the time required for a SBA review of those documents. SBA has been testing two pilot programs to expedite the processes for application and approval of a guaranty loan. The bank certification program aims to shorten the time required for SBA to review and approve guaranty loan applications. The operation effectiveness program is designed to reduce the number and complexity of the application documents. Both programs appear promising in shortening the time and simplifying the paperwork required to obtain a guaranteed loan. The bank certification program addresses only one aspect of the problem, the amount of time SBA uses to review loan applications. The program does little to broaden the participation of banks and other lenders in the program. SBA has yet to develop and implement a system to provide audit and oversight of the certified banks' loan portfolios. The need for a system to monitor the performance of the certified banks is especially important now that SBA has the authority to delegate the determination of eligibility and loan servicing and liquidation to lending institutions. The simplified application documents of the operation effectiveness program have shortened the loan application and review time in the one SBA region where it has been tested. However, the revised documents have not been adopted agencywide nor been used for loan applications in the bank certification program.

Abstract: "The IBM AutoLoan Exchange is a project of IBM Research, in partnership with the Banking, Finances, and Securities division, which connects automobile dealerships directly to lenders and credit bureau reporting services for rapid approval and funding of automobile loans. We have used TEX to typeset the financing contract and related documents required to close financing for an automobile purchase. In many ways, TEX was the perfect choice to satisfy our document needs. We have been able to eliminate the need for preprinted forms stocked by dealers and, instead, print complete contract documents customized for each loan. We will discuss the unique document requirements of this internet commerce application and describe our TEX-based solution."

Mortganomics teaches readers how to successfully negotiate the terms of a home mortgage with any bank, mortgage lender or broker. It provides detailed examples how lenders price their home loans and how they can subjectively increase a customer's interest rate to create larger commissions and loan costs. It includes samples of lender's rate sheets showing their wholesale costs for the individual interest rates, and explains how to make a lender guarantee that they will charge only their required minimum fees, and nothing extra that would increase force the borrower to take a higher interest rate. It gives readers a step-by-step verifiable method for paying off their mortgage years early, and an easy method to evaluate how competitive their interest rate and terms are in the marketplace. The book sugar coats nothing when it comes to exposing the ways lenders mark up their costs at a borrower's expense, and the ways that they hide important facts from their customers. This book provides dozens of easy to understand loan pricing calculations that readers can use to negotiate their loan

"This Book endeavors to provide the reader with an understanding of the basic concepts of real estate finance provisions that a lawyer must know and understand in order to provide effective counsel to borrowers in the context of closing a commercial real estate loan. This goal will be accomplished through the detailed analysis of key provisions contained in real estate mortgages and several other key mortgage loan documents. Lawyers new to the practice of real estate finance can benefit greatly from a highly practical evaluation of these key provisions, because in most instances they represent very important aspects of a mortgage transaction. This Book uses many provisions that were previously utilized in the Federal National Mortgage Association ("Fannie Mae") Deed of Trust form for multifamily housing, but this Book embellishes on those provisions and adds others that are also commonly used in commercial real estate loan transactions. In addition, this Book examines a number of other key loan documents that are often used in commercial real estate transactions. The goal in undertaking these examinations is to expose new lawyers to loan provisions that are now commonly used in commercial real estate loan documentation. In selecting these provisions, I have made a few assumptions, for several reasons. First, the loan provisions used in this Book contemplate that the mortgaged property is an income-producing property, as distinguished from a loan secured by a residence that the borrower would live in and which would not generate any income. A number of these provisions thus relate to the "commercial" nature of the property, such as the treatment of property rents. Second, unlike provisions contained in forms that some counsel for lenders have created and use for their first draft in a loan negotiation, the loan provisions used in this Book are relatively evenhanded and sometimes contain points that the borrower's counsel would want to seek on behalf of his/her client. When applicable, I have attempted to point out advantages and deficiencies contained in any of these provisions that could be utilized if the reader were to be engaged as counsel representing a borrower in a mortgage loan transaction, and also to give the reader strategies for use when negotiating these provisions. As indicated earlier, this Book is organized around the provisions of a mortgage and several other key documents, including the Letter of Intent, Closing Agenda, Note, and Carve Out Guaranty. Each part of this Book sets forth an introduction to, and then the verbatim text of, a specific provision of a given key loan document (which is set out in italic type), immediately followed by commentary on the italicized provision. My commentary explains what the applicable italicized loan provision means, what functions the provision serves, and any problems with the application or enforcement of the provision from a lender's or borrower's perspective. The commentary includes basic information that any lawyer new to mortgage transactions would find helpful, including potential pitfalls to watch out for from a borrower's counsel perspective, as well as suggested approaches for dealing with such pitfalls. This commentary also provides a thorough analysis that even a lawyer who is well-seasoned in commercial mortgage loan practice would find useful. At the end of this Book, in the Appendix section, I have included a full form Letter of Intent, Closing Agenda, Mortgage and Security Agreement, Note, and a form of "Bad-Boy" Carve Out Guaranty. Each of these Appendix documents includes all of the applicable provisions that have been included as an italicized excerpt in each applicable Section of this Book, so the reader can use them to better follow how these provisions fit into an actual document. This Book can be read cover to cover, especially by someone new to the practice of commercial real estate mortgage transactions. I hope that this Book will provide useful insight both to lawyers handling their first mortgage transactions and to more seasoned mortgage lawyers looking for a useful reference source"--
