To make an unforgettable wine": This was the dream and, eventually, the lifework of Virginie de Pichon-Longueville, Comtesse de Lalande, who lived in the French region of Médoc in the 1700s. She presided over what would become one of Bordeaux's greatest vineyards and gave it the name it retains to this day. This fascinating book tells the story of the vineyard, a tale that is tied to the very origins of the Médoc winemaking tradition. It is intertwined, too, with the legacy of the great family of Pichon-Longueville, which is tinged with drama and romance. And it is the story of a grand cru that has had a strong female presence
