

Las Batallas En El Desierto Jose Emilio Pacheco

One of the threads that runs through Elena Poniatowska's oeuvre is that of foreigners who have fallen in love with Mexico and its people. This is certainly the case of Querido Diego, te abraza Quiela--a brief novel (so short it was originally published in its entirety in Octavio Paz's literary magazine Vuelta). The Russian exile and painter Angelina Beloff writes from the cold and impoverished post-war Paris to Diego Rivera, her spouse of over ten years. Beloff sends these letters to which there is no response during a time when the emancipation of women has broken many of the standard models and the protagonist struggles to fashion her own. Elena Poniatowska has (re)created these letters and within them one finds the unforgettable testimony of an artist and her lover during the valuable crossroads of a new time when Diego Rivera was forging a new life in his native country. In this edition, Nathaniel Gardner comments on the truth and fiction Poniatowska has woven together to form this compact, yet rich, modern classic. Using archives in London, Paris and Mexico City (including Angelina's correspondence held in Frida Kahlo's own home) as well as interviews from the final remaining characters who knew the real Angelina, Gardner offers a mediation of the text and its historical groundings as well as critical commentary. This edition will appeal to both students and scholars of Latin American Studies as well as lovers of Mexican Literature and Art in general.

This collection of new translations brings together the small proportion of Kafka's works that he thought worthy of includes Metamorphosis, his most famous work, an exploration of horrific transformation and alienation; Meditation, his earlier studies; The Judgement, written in a single night of frenzied creativity; The Stoker, the first chapter of a novel set in America and a fascinating occasional piece, The Aeroplanes at Brescia, Kafka's eyewitness account of an air display in Italy. Together, these stories reveal the breadth of Kafka's literary vision and the extraordinary imaginative depth of his thought. How did men become the stars of the Mexican intellectual scene? Dude Lit examines the tricks of the trade and reveals how sometimes literary genius rests on privileges that men extend one another and that women permit. The makings of success have to do with superficial aspects, like conformist wardrobes and unsmiling expressions, and more complex technical skills, like friendship networks, prizewinners who become judges, dropouts who become teachers, and the key tactic of being a rule maker (the civilizado) to rule breaker (the bárbaro). Certain writing habits also predict success, with the "hard" category reserved for men's writing and even film directing. In both film and literature, critically respected art tends to rely on obscenity interpreted as originality, negative topics viewed as serious, and coolly inarticulate narrative as bullying understood as maximum literary achievement. To build the case regarding "rebellion as conformity," Dude Lit offers a wide set of examples while always returning to three figures, each born some two decades apart from the immediate present: Juan Rulfo (with Pedro Páramo), José Emilio Pacheco (with Las batallas en el desierto), and Guillermo Fadanelli (with Las muertas, as well as the range of his publications). Why do we believe Mexican men are competent performers of the intellectual? Dude Lit answers this question through a creative intersection of sources. Drawing on interviews, archival research, and critical readings, this provocative book changes the conversation on literature and gendered performance.

This book contains the story of Rommel, the famous German Field Marshal of World War II, commonly known as Desert Fox. Some of the earliest books, particularly those dating back to the 1900s and before, are now extremely scarce and increasingly expensive. We are republishing these classic works in affordable, high quality, modern editions, using the original text and artwork. The story of the last member of the aristocratic Azcoitia family, a monstrous mutation protected from the knowledge of the world by being surrounded with other freaks as his companions, The Obscene Bird of Night is a triumph of imaginative, visceral storytelling. Among its luxuriance, fecundity, horror, and energy will not soon fade from the reader's mind.

Beyond the Pyramid

Never before in English, this legendary precursor to eco-fiction turns the coming insect apocalypse on its head. A Wall Street Journal Best Science Fiction Book of 2021. A bitter drunk forsakes civilization and takes to the Mexican jungle, trapping animals, selling their pelts to buy liquor for colossal benders, and slowly rotting away in his fetid hut. His neighbors, a clan of the Lacodón tribe of Chiapas, however, see something more in him than he does himself (dubbing him Wise Owl): when he falls deathly ill, a shaman named Black Ant saves his life—and, almost by chance, in driving out his fever, she exorcises the demon of alcoholism as well. Slowly recovering, weak in his hammock, our antihero discovers a curious thing about the mosquitoes' buzzing, "which to human ears seemed so irritating and pointless." Perhaps, in fact, it constituted a language he might learn—and with the help of a flute and a homemade dictionary—even speak. Slowly, he masters Mosquil, with astonishing consequences... Will he harness the mosquitoes' global might? And will his new powers enable him to take over the world that's rejected him? A book far ahead of its time, His Name Was Death looks down the double-barreled shotgun of ecological disaster and colonial exploitation—and cackles a graveyard laugh.

A narration of dramas played out from 1578 to 2000 in Tierra del Fuego by the native Yamana, Darwin, explorers, sealers, whalers and missionaries.

"We walked toward the part of the library where the air smelled as if it had been interred for years..... Finally, we got to the hallway where the wooden floor was the creakiest, and we sensed a strange whiff of excitement and fear. It smelled like a creature from a bygone time. It smelled like a dragon." Thirteen-year-old Juan's favorite things in the world are koalas, eating roast chicken, and the summer-time. This summer, though, is off to a terrible start. First, Juan's parents separate and his dad goes to Paris. Then, as if that wasn't horrible enough, Juan is sent away to his strange Uncle Tito's house for the entire break! Uncle Tito is really odd: he has zigzag eyebrows; drinks ten cups of smoky tea a day; and lives inside a huge, mysterious library. One day, while Juan is exploring the library, he notices something inexplicable and rushes to tell Uncle Tito. "The books moved!" His uncle drinks all his tea in one gulp and, sputtering, lets his nephew in on a secret: Juan is a Princeps Reader--which means books respond magically to him--and he's the only person capable of finding the elusive, never-before-read Wild Book. Juan teams up with his new friend Catalina and his little sister, and together they delve through books that scuttle from one shelf to the next, topple over unexpectedly, or even disappear altogether to find The Wild Book and discover its secret. But will they find it before the wicked, story-stealing Pirate Book does?

"Technologies of Gender builds a bridge between the fashionable orthodoxies of academic theory (Lacan, Foucault, Derrida, et al.) and the frequently-marginalized contributions of feminist theory. . . . In sum, de Lauretis has written a book that should be required reading for every feminist in need of theoretical ammunition—and for every theorist in need of feminist enlightenment." —B. Ruby Rich " . . . sets philosophical ideas humming. . . . she has much to say." —Cineaste "I can think of no other work that pushes the debate on the female subject forward with such passion and intellectual rigor." —SubStance This book addresses the question of gender in poststructuralist theoretical discourse, postmodern fiction, and women's cinema. It examines the construction of gender both as representation and as self-representation in relation to several kinds of texts and argues that feminism is producing a radical rewriting, as well as a rereading, of the dominant forms of Western culture.

Classic warped and wonderful stories from a "genius" (The New York Times) and master storyteller. Brief, intense, painfully funny, and shockingly honest, Etgar Keret's stories are snapshots that illuminate with intelligence and wit the hidden truths of life. As with the best writers of fiction, hilarity and anguish are the twin pillars of his work. Keret covers a remarkable emotional and narrative terrain—from a father's first lesson to his boy to a standoff between soldiers caught up in the Middle East conflict to a slice of life where nothing much happens. New to Riverhead's list, these wildly inventive, uniquely humane stories are for fans of Etgar Keret's inimitable style and readers of transforming, brilliant fiction.

Hi, my name is Christopher, and this is my story, maybe It's just like yours, or maybe it isn't. We might not have anything in common, but, we may be very similar and have questions without answers. I'm sure we are both constatly hunted by our past. Although we may not, I don't think I'm like you, my shy friend, invisible in the crowd, addicted to be an addict. In the end, it doesn't matter whom I look like, or who I truly am. What you have in your hands is my journal and it is welcoming you to live inside of a "MAYBE," and to fall in love as much as to end up ignoring it. Life introduced her to me, to show me my desire of living through her eyes. Everything started in May, but I can't tell you what day is today. I'd like to welcome you to my life, filled with excess and fun. I invite you to a world merged with crisis, and to a life filled with music, concerts and poetry.

Powerful and poignant, a masterpiece. 'Through the Wheat' depicts the horrors of World War 1: the first modern war fought in trenches with mustard gas, artillery, and tanks. Thomas Boyd brings home the psychological damage done to men under extreme pressure fighting for their livers thousands of miles from home. Unforgettable!

Intense, despairing accounts of life in Mexico City.

Autor de una obra prolífica y variada, José Emilio Pacheco (ciudad de México, 1939) ha ejercido con éxito diversos géneros narrativa, poesía y ensayo si bien en su literatura las fronteras entre ellos no son definitivas. Los trabajos inéditos reunidos en este volumen son una muestra de la multiplicidad de intereses que han guiado su creación literaria, en la cual conviven con la misma fuerza la cultura letrada y la cultura popular.

Buzz Meeks-bagman, ex-Narco goon, and pimp for Howard Hughes-is fighting communism for the money. All three men have purchased tickets to a nightmare.

"Jose Emilio Pacheco, the most talented poet of his generation, often writes poems in which animals act as his alter ego, conveying his perceptions - sometimes comic, often tragic - of the human condition. His Album de zoologia, of which this is the English version, gives voice to myriad creatures who inhabit land, sea, air, and even (mythically) fire. Through their perceptions, the poet challenges much of what is dark in the human psyche - cruelty toward ourselves and other life forms, destruction of the fragile world that all living creatures share."--BOOK JACKET. The Go-between Siamese fighting fish, cockroaches, cats, a snake, and a strange fungus all serve here as mirrors that reflect the uncanny aspects of human nature buried within us. The traits and fates of these animals illuminate such deeply natural, human experiences as the cruelty born of cohabitation, the desire to reproduce and the impulse not to, and the inexplicable connection that can bind, eerily, two beings together. Each Nettel tale creates, with tightly wound narrative tension, wherein her characters feel excruciatingly human, exploring how the wounds we incur in life manifest themselves with clandestinely, irrevocably, both unseen and overtly. In a precise writing style that is both subtle and spellbinding, Nettel renders the ordinary unsettling, and the grotesque exquisite. Natural Histories is the winner of the 3rd Ribera del Duero International Award for Short Narratives, an important Spanish literature prize.

"A wonderful nightmare of a book: tender and frightening, disturbing but compassionate. Fever Dream is a triumph of Schweblin's outlandish imagination." -Juan Gabriel Vasquez, author of The Sound of Things Falling and Reputations A young woman named Amanda lies dying in a rural hospital clinic. A boy named David sits beside her. She's not his mother. He's not her child. Together, they tell a haunting story of broken souls, toxins, and the power and desperation of family. Fever Dream is a nightmare come to life, a ghost story for the real world, a love story and a cautionary tale. One of the freshest new voices to come out of the Spanish language and translated into English for the first time, Samanta Schweblin creates an aura of strange psychological menace and otherworldly reality in this absorbing, unsettling, taut novel.

A Novel

Children of Globalization is the first book-length exploration of contemporary Diasporic Coming-of-age Novels in the context of globalized and de facto multicultural societies. Diasporic

Coming-of-age Novels subvert the horizon of expectations of the originating and archetypal form of the genre, the traditional Bildungsroman, which encompasses the works of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Charles Dickens, and Jane Austen, and illustrates middle-class, European, "enlightened," and overwhelmingly male protagonists who become accommodated citizens, workers, and spouses whom the readers should imitate. Conversely, Diasporic Coming-of-age Novels have manifold ways of defining youth and adulthood. The culturally-hybrid protagonists, often experiencing intersectional oppression due to their identities of race, gender, class, or sexuality, must negotiate what it means to become adults in their own families and social contexts, at times being undocumented or otherwise unable to access full citizenship, thus enabling complex and variegated formative processes that beg the questions of nationhood and belonging in increasingly globalized societies worldwide.

On the face of it, Leslie is a normal, healthy, well-adjusted fourteen-year-old girl. She goes to a good school, has a great friend in Cavett, and a mother who loves her to the moon and back. She should be happy, yet she's not. She would be, she thinks, if only she were thinner. But "thinking thin" becomes a dangerous obsession and Leslie's weight drops to five stone, threatening to destroy her and the whole fabric of her family life. Only by realizing that this condition is an illness -and one that has its roots in a deep problem -can Leslie hope to survive.

The student massacre at Tlatelolco in Mexico City on October 2, 1968, marked the beginning of an era of rapid social change in Mexico, which has included a crisis in hegemony, a major economic crisis, the devastating 1985 earthquake, and the emergence of grassroots social movements and a multiparty system. Such social upheaval has long been the concern of Mexican novelists and other intellectuals, and the generation writing in the years since 1968 is no different. In this illuminating study, Cynthia Steele explores how the writers of the past two decades have responded to the 1968 student movement and to the social crisis it signaled in terms of political change and gender identity. The study opens with a panoramic view of political developments between 1968 and 1975, together with the various trends in post-1968 Mexican narrative. In succeeding chapters, Steele analyzes in detail novels by four outstanding authors--Hasta no verte Jesus mio (1969) by Elena Poniatowska; Palinuro de Mexico (1977) and Noticias del imperio (1987) by Fernando del Paso; Las batallas en el desierto (1981) Jose Emilio Pacheco; and Cerca del fuego(1986) by Jose Agustin. Each of these works represents a major tendency of the past twenty years: testimonial literature, the Joycean "total novel," the neorealist Bildungsroman, and "La Onda." Each novel, in a highly original fashion, addresses the dilemma of belonging to a country whose present is felt to be unequal to its historical promise, in which the first social revolution of the twentieth century has been displaced by authoritarianism and crisis. The final chapter surveys narrative of the period 1985-1988, when new social movements, including neocardenismo, an urban housing movement, and popular feminism, emerged from the ruins of the 1985 earthquake to militate for a more democratic political and economic system. The study concludes with an extensive bibliography of narrative, literary theory, cultural studies, and historical and sociological analyses published during the past two pivotal decades. For everyone interested in the confrontation between sociopolitical change and the arts, Politics, Gender, and the Mexican Novel, 1968-1988 will be important reading.

Barcelona detective Pepe Carvalho's radical past catches up with him when a powerful businessman—a patron of artists and activists—is found dead after going missing for a year. In search of the spirit of Paul Gauguin, Stuart Pedrell—eccentric Barcelona businessman, construction magnate, dreamer, and patron of poets and painters—disappeared not long after announcing plans to travel to the South Pacific. A year later he is found stabbed to death at a construction site in Barcelona. Gourmand gumshoe Pepe Carvalho is hired by Pedrell's wife to find out what happened. Carvalho, a jaded former communist, must travel through circles of the old anti-Franco left wing on the trail of the killer. But with little appetite for politics, Carvalho also leads us on a tour through literature, cuisine, and the criminal underbelly of Barcelona in a typically brilliant twist on the genre by a Spanish master.

This is the first major retrospective gathering to appear in an English-Spanish bilingual format of the work of one of Mexico's foremost writers. It is a glittering and giant technical achievement, as brilliant and instantly visible as Hart Crane's The Bridge.

One of the great masterpieces of modern Latin American fiction, Terra Nostra is concerned with nothing less than the history of Spain and of South America, with the Indian Gods and with Christianity, with the birth, the passion, and the death of civilizations. Fuentes skillfully blends a wide range of literary forms, stories within stories, Mexican and Spanish myth, and famous literary characters in this novel that is both a historical epic and an apocalyptic vision of modern times. Terra Nostra is that most ambitious and rare of creations—a total work of art.

IN THE SOUNDS AND SEAS, a wordless comic characterized by poetic investigations in to mythology and the quest for meaning-making, brought to life by the mesmerizingly patterned ink illustrations of award-winning author Marnie Galloway. In the style of epic poems of myth and monsters, IN THE SOUNDS AND SEAS opens with a creation myth: three figures sit around a fire in the woods and burst in to song, and their voices weave and blend together to make the ocean and the world. Within this new world the boundary between truth and fiction, fantasy and reality, are blurred. The protagonist lives in this "sung" landscape where she builds a ship to sail and find the legendary singers of their world, with the help of two others who are less haunted by her mission. It is a story about obsessive creative production, the search for creative community and meaning through art, and what happens when dreams we invest our whole selves in to fail.
