Notes

Perhaps because health care is a local service sector, health economists have paid little attention to international linkages between domestic health care economies. However, the

Medical

Reimbursement

growth in domestic health care sectors is often attributed to medical innovations whose returns are earned worldwide.

Because world returns drive innovation and innovation is

Medical

Government

central to
spending growth,
spending growth
in a given
country is thereby highly affected by
health care
economies and
policies of other countries. This paper analyzes
the unique

positive and
normative
implications of
these innovation-
induced linkages
across countries
when governments
centrally price
health care.
Providing world

medical

innovation under such central pricing involves a
public-goods
problem; the
taxation to fund
reimbursements
involves a private
domestic cost
with an international
benefit of medical innovation. This

Acces PDF

Medical

Rules For Central

Employees

has the direct
implication that
medical
innovations have inefficiently low
world returns. It also has the positive
in one country
depend

negatively on those of others; reimbursements are "strategic substitutes" through free riding. Because reimbursements are strategic substitutes, world concentration of health care is a significant issue.

Medical

A small European country has no access-innovation trade-off in its pricing; it will have low reimbursements because it does not affect world returns and sees the same innovations regardless of its policy. The public-goods problem of

innovation

thereby implies
that the United States, despite being the world's largest buyer,
will pay the highest
reimbursements.

This problem also

Acces PDF

Medical

implies that free riding counteracts the standard positive impact of larger world markets on innovation when health care concentration falls. Indeed, currently, health care is highly concentrated;
