Medical Nutrition Therapy introduces the fundamentals of nutrition assessment and therapy, and revisits these concepts throughout the changing context of various disease states. The text utilizes a case-based approach which incorporates problem-based learning and engages the reader in various clinically based scenarios after discussing the core science of the subject matter. Each chapter opens with a case study and details and further information from the case are woven throughout the chapter in order to reinforce the relevance of various topics. Chapter cases go on to discuss how the nutrition care process can be applied to the case.

examined include 1) interviewing, 2) counseling, and 3) behavior modification. The following aspects of the group process are explored: facilitator and participant functions, guidelines for seeking consensus, meeting management, and using groups to supplement individual counseling. Guidelines are provided on planning, implementing, and evaluating learning, and on motivating clients and patients to make dietary changes. Numerous examples clarify key concepts and techniques; activities and exercises at the end of each chapter demonstrate how concepts and principles can be applied to actual life situations.

Malnutrition and obesity are both common among Americans over age 65. There are also a host of other medical conditions from which older people and other Medicare beneficiaries suffer that could be improved with appropriate nutritional intervention. Despite that, access to a nutrition professional is very limited. Do nutrition services benefit older people in terms of morbidity, mortality, or quality of life? Which health professionals are best qualified to provide such services? What would be the cost to Medicare of such services? Would the cost be offset by reduced illness in this population? This book addresses these questions, provides recommendations for nutrition services for the elderly, and considers how the coverage policy should be approached and practiced. The book discusses the role of nutrition therapy in the management of a number of diseases. It also examines what the elderly receive in the way of nutrition services along the continuum of care settings and addresses the areas of expertise needed by health professionals to provide appropriate nutrition services and therapy.
