This text offers perspectives on media coverage of the courts. How accurate and unbiased is television and newspaper coverage of legal issues? The author looks at economics, the influence of ratings, and how accuracy is sometimes lost amid the often conflicting values of these two institues. He also examines the biases of both the courts and the press.

Excerpt from Idaho Reports, Vol. 2: Reports of Cases Argued and Determined in the Supreme Court of the Territory of Idaho and the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho This volume is prepared under authority of an Act of the Idaho Legislature, (laws 1893, p. And published with the approval of the Supreme Court. Under this act the State has secured the full benefit of the unusual facilities of the publishers of the National Reporter System for accurate reporting and economical publication. The cases herein contained were all originally reported by the experienced editors of the Pacific Reporter, and published in that series with the decisions of the Supreme Courts of eleven other States and Territories. The headnotes have been carefully revised, abstracts of briefs of counsel have been added, with supplementary statements of facts where necessary; and the reports have all been submitted in proof to the Judges of the Supreme Court, and all corrections or changes which they have requested have been duly made. Thus the editorial work in this volume has been done by professional editors trained in the special business of reporting, and with the supervision of the Supreme Court, without any cost whatever to the State. By using the compact typography of the National Reporter System we are enabled to put into a single volume what would easily make three volumes in the ordinary State Report style. The present volume contains 225 cases, some of them of unusual length; while the average volume of State or Territorial Reports in the West contains but from 50 to 100 cases. Again, since a large part of the expense of composition has been saved, - much of the type having been already set for the Pacific Reporter, we are enabled to supply the State and citizens with such copies as they need at a price which would be far below the cost under ordinary circumstances.
