erotica A lonely librarian finds that she's so engrossed in books such that she's missing out on real life. After joining an online dating agency, she 'meets' a man who seems to be perfect for her. Peter shares a common love of books. After many virtual dates, they decide that it's time to meet for real. One evening he turns up at the library to collect her for their first real date.

Over dinner they find that they do indeed have a lot in common – so much that neither one of them wants the evening to end. As Peter is the perfect gentleman, he walks her home. As they pass the library, she suggests that they finish the evening off with coffee, telling Peter that although she can't take him back to her place, she can make him a cup of coffee there. Peter accepts, but they both have more than just coffee on their minds.

She is very pretty and young looking. The lustful gazes of her male students were only matched by the gazes of their dads. As a single woman, she blushes at how many times she touched herself thinking about what might happen with one of those dads. She has only slipped up one time by having an encounter with a hot dad in the back of his car. She is careful until one afternoon. But what happened that Friday afternoon shocked her because that is when Timmy came back. After a happy reunion, Tim talked about what a crush he had on Summer that year when he was her student in middle school. Now a handsome and dashing man that oozes sexuality, it isn't long before youthful dreams become a very real encounter in that empty middle school teacher's lounge. Is it worth the risk?
