An exploration
of why we play
video games
despite the fact that we are almost certain to feel unhappy

when we fail at them. We may think of video games as being "fun," but in The Art of Failure, Jesper Juul claims that this is almost entirely mistaken. When we play video happiness or bliss. Instead,

next level.

Humans may have a fundamental desire to succeed and feel competent, but game players
choose to engage in an activity in which they are nearly certain to fail and feel incompetent. So why do we play video games even though they make us unhappy? Juul examines this paradox. In video games, as in tragic works

of art,
literature,
theater, and
cinema, it seems that we want to experience
unpleasantness
even if we also dislike it.
Reader or audience

reaction to tragedy is often explained as catharsis, as a
purging of negative emotions. But,
Juul points out,
this doesn't seem to be the case for video
game players.

Games do not
purge us of unpleasant emotions; they produce them in the first place.
What, then,
does failure in
video game
playing do? Juul argues that failure in a game is unique in that when you fail in a game, you (not a character) are in some way inadequate. Yet games also motivate us to play more, in order to escape that inadequacy, and the feeling of escaping failure (often by improving skills) is a central enjoyment of games. Games, writes Juul, are the art of failure: the singular art
