Workshop participants strategized about how to incentivize companies to fortify their CNS drug development programs, shrinking obstacles that currently deter ventures. Representatives from academia, government agencies, patient groups, and industry gathered to share information and viewpoints, and to brainstorm about budget-neutral policy changes that could help widen the pipeline toward drugs that address unmet needs for CNS disorders. This report summarizes the presentations and discussion of the workshop.

The health of populations within communities is challenged daily, almost at an alarming rate. The ABCs of Program or Project Planning will help students of health care understand organizational development for a workable community health care plan. In order to offset the many dilemmas health care providers are faced with, students must identify community needs by priority, start with the basics, research the facts, and organize the findings. The organization that develops will blossom by having concerned, hard-working participants working under a collaborative effort. The trend in health care has been for prevention and maintenance, as opposed to treating only the acute situation. So it is a particular challenge to make this information understandable, as well as meaningful for RNs who mostly work in an acute care setting or have never had experience on a community level dealing with the health of the public at large. This book provides the student information necessary to step out of the box and learn something different.
