anniversary of its incorporation, said committee to report at the next annual, or at a special meeting of the town, as to plans, expenses, etc. The committee met in the Frank S. Stevens Public Library Building, May 1, 1914, and organized by choosing O.O. Wright Chairman, and Elmer S. Sears Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. Wright was appointed editor and historian of the work. It was agreed that since so much has been published concerning the Town, the work should be largely that of editing and compiling such records and other material as may be available and adapted to the special

At the next Town meeting, March 1, 1915, the committee reported progress, and it was "Voted - To accept the report of the committee appointed at the last annual meeting relative to a town history, and to appropriate $200 for the purpose of carrying on the work." At the annual meeting held March 6th, 1916, the committee reported progress, and offered the following Resolutions: "Resolved, That the said Committee be authorized to complete, print and

This is the first full-length study of Swansea's urban development from the late eighteenth to the mid nineteenth century. the face of rapid urban development elsewhere in Wales. The history of Swansea's early nineteenth-century coming-of-age is traced through its participant individuals and institutions. From wealthy industrialist employers to gentlemen scientists and from banking establishments to assembly rooms and libraries, Swansea's growing reputation as a prosperous, flourishing and "intelligent" town is explored. With its combined functions as a metal smelting town, bathing resort, port and cultural centre its urban character was arguably unique, but in its experience of urbanization it shared much in common with towns and cities the length and breadth of Britain. The question of how to maintain health, order and safety in an environment undergoing demographic and industrial growth while, at the same time, providing the facilities and institutions befitting a place of growing importance was the key preoccupation of leading townsmen in Swansea and elsewhere in the 1780-1855 period. These all important decades in Swansea's urban history, long obscured from view by the legacy of copper smoke and post-industrial dereliction, provide an important new perspective on the history of modern Wales in which, traditionally, Cardiff, Merthyr Tydfil and even Bristol have been better known as towns of influence in Welsh urban life.
