

The Official Magazine Of Coronation St Number 47

Coronation Magazine
Coronation Magazine of Song Hits
Heaton High School Magazine 1953
Coronation Edition
Coronation Street Coloring Book
Hamlyn
The New Elizabethan Age
The Coronation

Coronation Courier, 2nd June 1953

Coronation Magazine

New York magazine was born in 1968 after a run as an insert of the New York Herald Tribune and quickly made a place for itself as the trusted resource for readers across the country. With award-winning writing and photography covering everything from politics and food to theater and fashion, the magazine's consistent mission has been to reflect back to its audience the energy and excitement of the city itself, while celebrating New York as both a place and an idea.

History, Archaeology and Conservation

The Coronation Book of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth

The Coronation of Their Most Gracious Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, May 12th 1937

Current Opinion

New York Magazine

Many of the earliest books, particularly those dating back to the 1900s and before, are now extremely scarce and increasingly expensive. We are republishing many of these classic works in affordable, high quality, modern editions, using the original text and artwork.

A Contents-subject Index to General and Periodical Literature

Coronation Magazine of Song Hits

Heaton High School Magazine

Coronation Costumes

The British National Bibliography

Lose yourself in the history of your favorite soap with this fun and fascinating coloring book, which is sure to delight Corrie fans old and new. Not just a relaxing and creative activity book, this also serves as a potted history of the show with your favorite characters from over 55 years of storylines and drama. The book is made up of 45 scenes to color in, from Elsie Tanner in the very first show, through classic scenes and iconic title shots, and ending up with the stars of the current episodes. Coronation Street is Britain's longest-running and best-loved soap. Now you can pick up your coloring pencils and immerse yourself in the history of your favorite street.

Nash's Coronation Number

The House Magazine of the Blackburn Group of Companies

The "coronation" Portrait of Queen Elizabeth I

The New Monthly Magazine and Humorist

The Saturday Magazine

Constructed in 1297?1300 for King Edward I, the Coronation Chair ranks amongst the most remarkable and precious treasures to have survived from the Middle Ages. It incorporated in its seat a block of sandstone, which the king seized at Scone, following his victory over the Scots in 1296. For centuries, Scottish kings had been inaugurated on this symbolic 'Stone of Scone', to which a copious mythology had also become attached. Edward I presented the Chair, as a holy relic, to the Shrine of St Edward the Confessor in Westminster Abbey, and most English monarchs since the fourteenth century have been crowned in it, the last being HM Queen Elizabeth II, in 1953. The Chair and the Stone have had eventful histories: in addition to physical alterations, they suffered abuse in the eighteenth century, suffragettes attached a bomb to them in 1914, they were hidden underground during the Second World War, and both were damaged by the gang that sacrilegiously broke into Westminster Abbey and stole the Stone in 1950. It was recovered and restored to the Chair, but since 1996 the Stone has been exhibited on loan in Edinburgh Castle. Now somewhat battered through age, the Chair was once highly ornate, being embellished with gilding, painting and coloured glass. Yet, despite its profound historical significance, until now it has never been the subject of detailed archaeological recording. Moreover, the remaining fragile decoration was in need of urgent conservation, which was carried out in 2010?12, accompanied by the first holistic study of the Chair and Stone. In 2013 the Chair was redisplayed to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee of the Coronation of HM The Queen. The latest investigations have revealed and documented the complex history of the Chair: it has been modified on several occasions, and the Stone has been reshaped and much altered since it left Scone. This volume assembles, for the first time, the complementary evidence derived from history, archaeology and conservation, and presents a factual account of the Coronation Chair and the Stone of Scone, not as separate artefacts, but as the entity that they have been for seven centuries. Their combined significance to the British Monarchy and State - and to the history and archaeology of the English and Scottish nations - is greater than the sum of their parts. Also published here for the first time is the second Coronation Chair, made for Queen Mary II in 1689. Finally, accounts are given of the various full-size replica chairs in Britain and Canada, along with a selection of the many models in metal and ceramic which have been made during the last two centuries.

Clan Munro Magazine; Coronation Number
Imperial Coronation Coronation Number ...

The Coronation Chair and Stone of Scone Watson's Jeffersonian Magazine

In the first half of the twentieth century, many writers and artists turned to the art and received example of the Elizabethans as a means of articulating an emphatic (and anti-Victorian) modernity. By the middle of that century, this cultural neo-Elizabethanism had become absorbed within a broader mainstream discourse of national identity, heritage and cultural performance. Taking strength from the Coronation of a new, young Queen named Elizabeth, the New Elizabethanism of the 1950s heralded a nation that would now see its 'modern', televised monarch preside over an imminently glorious and artistic age. This book provides the first in-depth investigation of New Elizabethanism and its legacy. With contributions from leading cultural practitioners and scholars, its essays explore New Elizabethanism as variously manifest in ballet and opera, the Coronation broadcast and festivities, national historiography and myth, the idea of the 'Young Elizabethan', celebrations of air travel and new technologies, and the New Shakespeareanism of theatre and television. As these essays expose, New Elizabethanism was much more than a brief moment of optimistic hyperbole. Indeed, from modern drama and film to the reinternment of Richard III, from the London Olympics to the funeral of Margaret Thatcher, it continues to pervade contemporary artistic expression, politics, and key moments of national pageantry.

The Gentleman's Magazine

The Strand Magazine

Lines

Magazine Articles on the Consular Service, Chiefly of the United States, 1845-1912

Serials in the British Library

Prince Addison is only several weeks away from inheriting the Kingdom of Tarsurella. The entire Palace is ablaze with excitement, as the Royal Family prepares for the event of a lifetime. Despite the exciting event which is near at hand, Addison and his younger siblings (a seven of them!) must carry on with their daily activities. Addison's sisters, Princesses Bridget, Chasity, and Hope, have their struggles with being iconic European starlets of a modern day monarchy. The teen heiresses grace magazine covers, smile for photoshoots, and gracefully glide through important interviews-until a certain American popstar arrives on the scene. Kennetic Energy, the wildly popular band from the United States, is chosen to play at Addison Coronation. David Carter, the band's handsome lead singer, fumbles through awkward moments with Princess Hope-in front of the cameras. When an embarrassing rumor sparks that Princess Hope is dating the young fellow, she is determined to get the band fired from their Royal gig. Meanwhile, Princess Chasity is dealing with her own fragile affairs of the heart. Her new security guard, Hanson Fletcher, is completely captivating, yet entirely frustrating. She attempts to keep the entrance of her heart firmly protected, while following the wisdom of Proverbs 4:23. But can she be successful in guarding her heart, from her security guard? The Coronation is Book #1 in The Tales of Tarsurella Trilogy.

Clogher Diocesan Magazine

Souvenir Magazine, July 29 : Seventh Coronation Anniversary

The Railway Magazine

Manurewa School, F1-2 Magazine, Coronation Issue

The Pall Mall Magazine