Agriculture plays a

economy,
especially in rural areas, and further
progress in agriculture will remain important
as Bangladesh's
economy
continues to
evolve.

Bangladesh has made significant agricultural policy reforms since the 1980s, which has largely contributed to achieving self-sufficiency in rice production.

However, these policies are now creating headwinds, constraining the emergence of a more diversified production system.

With rapid urbanization and income growth, dietary patterns are changing in Bangladesh and new market opportunities are emerging for

diverse, safe, and nutritious foods.

Thus, additional
productive
diversification in agriculture and
modernization
along the agri-food
value chain are needed in order to allow the sector to
seize the emerging

domestic market
opportunities.

Promoting greater
diversification and
modernization of
the agri-food

Bangladesh will require
repurposing the country's agricultural support

along with
increasing private investment, both
value chain and in
support services to
that chain. The
agri-food
ecosystem
analysis in the report has identified critical constraints to the diversification and modernization of the agri-food sector. The major productivity constraints include land fragmentation and informality in the land rental markets; limited access to quality

seeds for
nonpaddy crops;
limited knowledge
of and adoption of
good agricultural practices, reflected
in unbalanced use
and overuse of
inputs; and limited
use of farmer
aggregation
models, which

constrains the
delivery of
extension services,
access to
financing, and
linking with
markets. Other key
constraints, which
are preventing off-
farm value addition
and
commercialization

in the sector,
include the limited

of the investment

several branches of the social sciences and their perspectives regarding their relations with decision-making processes: computer science, education, linguistics, sociology, and management. The decision-making process in social contexts is based on the analysis of sound alternatives using evaluative criteria.

Therefore, this process is one that can be rational or irrational, and can be based on knowledge and/or beliefs. A decision-making process always produces a final decision, which may or may not imply

computer science,
explore how the rise
of algorithms and the growth in computing
power over the years

and examines how
progress is manifested

fourth part, on
sociology, explores
how society can be

and religion.
