

Vignette

Put direct experience in a small package and launch it worldwide. Write your life story in short vignettes of 1,500 to 1,800 words. Write eulogies and anecdotes or vignettes of life stories and personal histories for mini-biographies and autobiographies. Then condense or contract the life stories or personal histories into PowerPoint presentations and similar slide shows on disks using lots of photos and one-page of life story. Finally, collect lots of vignettes and flesh-out the vignettes, linking them together into first-person diary-style novels and books, plays, skits, or other larger works. Write memoirs or eulogies for people or ghostwrite biographies and autobiographies for others. The vignette can be read in ten minutes. So fill magazine space with a direct experience vignette. Magazine space needs only 1,500 words. When you link many vignettes together, each forms a book chapter or can be adapted to a play or script. Included are a full-length diary-format first person novel and a three-act play, including a monologue for performances. There's a demand for direct life experiences written or produced as vignettes and presented in small packages. Save those vignettes electronically. Later, they can be placed together as chapters in a book or adapted as a play or script, turned into magazine feature, specialty, or news columns, or offered separately as easy-to-read packages.

If you are a non-mathematician who wants to stay that way, Mathematical Vignettes is the one book you should read to be informed. Written expressly for non-mathematicians, it is a collection of very short descriptions of numerous branches of mathematics and their relevance to areas of public debate and to everyday life. Most of these branches have nothing to do with numbers or formulas, are not even mentioned in high school, and are unknown to most people. For example, the vignette A Danger Scale discusses how dangers in everyday life can be evaluated without sensationalism. Other selections from the approximately thirty vignettes include Encryption, Fractals, Games, Knots, Recognition, Military Math, Chaos, Estimation, and an unusual one titled Statistics - A Rant. A few vignettes are historical and one is humorous. The person who reads Mathematical Vignettes will gain an understanding of the unsuspected breadth and utility of modern mathematics as well as unsuspected pleasure at discovering a new lens through which to view the world.

Discover how to improve classroom instruction with vignette analysis, an engaging and relevant form of professional development. The book features a wide variety of vignettes—from across 6–12 content areas such as English language arts, math, science, and social studies—designed to help teachers spot practices they like (or don ’ t like) and help them to connect the teaching practices described to well-established and research-supported frameworks. Each vignette is followed by an analysis of the lesson, which includes questions, prompts, and ideas of how to continue the conversation for pre- and in-service teachers as well as teacher educators on an individual basis, small groups, or as a class.

Sometimes we just want someone to hand us a bottle of wine. Sometimes we want to learn more about that wine. And sometimes we want to feel something about wine. In Vignette, sommelier Jane Lopes recommends the 100 bottles of wine (and some spirits and beers) to best expand your wine journey, giving you a complete palate education of the important styles, grapes, regions, and flavors of this magical and ever-growing world. Alongside that, you will find imaginative ways to engage with the foundational wine knowledge that underpins a good drinking experience. And then there is Jane's own narrative – the stories of triumph and defeat that comprise her life in wine. It's part memoir and part wine book, but a lot more fun than either alone. These are wines to live with, learn from and take solace in – a joyous, surprising, and revelatory response to that age-old question, "What should I drink?"

Homecoming Predator has been to combat zones around the world, and he has squared off against some of the toughest opponents in the free world. However, his biggest challenge awaits: going home to Detroit on leave. Urban Blight The house is normal, Mom is her same old self, but everything else has changed. The city is crumbling, and the gangs are getting bolder (though not smarter). Strangest of all, Predator's brother Montrell has turned over a new leaf. No longer the hellraiser he once was, Montrell has started up an urban farm and wine-making endeavor. First Blood, Last Chances However, when the gangs move on Montrell's farm, Predator finds himself staring at the fallout of past mistakes and trying to help his brother fend off an army intent on ruining the honest business. Predator must move fast and stand strong, if he doesn't want to buy the farm . . . Kinetic Force Vignettes are short stories and novellas that target a single Kinetic Force or Skorpion character and provide a look into their lives and the drives that define them. These vignettes might build on elements from the thrilling Kinetic Force adventures Daniel R. Robichaud writes, but they are intended to provide satisfying standalone stories to give a clear look at what makes these individual characters tick.

Love is the strongest weapon we have as humans. So many adolescent relationships are based on shielding ones most internal desires. Instead of openly professing their feelings for one another, a tireless game of hard to get, cat and mouse and shadows and mirrors is pursued. Coinciding with a newfound need to establish themselves in the community – the guy who can sleep with the most girls and drink the most beer or the girl with the most friends and party invitations – adolescence in rife with several rites of passage, some good and some deadly. An exploration of courage, honesty and consequences, Coffee Shop Vignette explores the true strength of a human love and the measures we will take to keep it.

LARE Review

Comprised in Two Hundred and Thirty Vignette Engravings

"The purpose of this paper is to describe a multimedia presentation of the background information needed to participate in a COBRAS vignette staff training exercise. Vignette exercises provide opportunities for brigade staffs to practice selected aspects of the planning and execution of heavy armored brigade missions. Because each exercise targets a different staff process, participants must become acquainted with the background scenario that provides the context for the activities they will practice. Training materials originally developed for the presentation of this background information were paper-based. To the detriment of the exercise, participants have had a tendency to avoid reading these materials. Multimedia may provide a more stimulating and efficient delivery method, but only if it is well designed. The outline of a multimedia presentation for one of the vignettes is developed using guidelines concerning the structure of the information being presented, sensory modalities suited to types of information, and principles of intrinsic motivation. The paper recommends testing the effectiveness of multimedia for delivering this type of training information."--DTIC.
