The ancient Greek
lyric poet

Simonides of Keos
was the first poet
in the Western tradition to take money for poetic composition. From this starting point,
Anne Carson
launches an

File Type PDF

Viva Valentina

exploration, poetic
in its own right, of the idea of poetic economy. She offers a reading of certain of Simonides' texts
and aligns these with writings of the modern Romanian
poet Paul Celan, a Jew and survivor

of the Holocaust,
whose
"economies" of language are notorious. Asking such questions as,
What is lost when
words are wasted?
and Who profits
when words are saved? Carson reveals the two

poets' striking commonalities. In Carson's view Simonides and Celan share a similar mentality or disposition toward the world, language and the work of the poet. Economy of the Unlost begins by showing how each of the two poets stands in a state of alienation between two worlds. In Simonides' case, the gift economy of fifth-century b.c. Greece was giving way to one based on money and commodities, while spanned pre- and post-Holocaust worlds, and he himself, writing in German, became estranged from his native language.

Celan's life

Carson goes on to consider various aspects of the two poets' techniques for coming to grips with the invisible

through the visible world. A focus on the genre of the
epitaph grants
insights into the kinds of exchange
the poets envision
between the living and the dead.

Assessing the impact on Simonidean

composition of the

influenced the exactitude and clarity of Simonides' style,

and proposes a comparison with Celan's interest in the "negative design" of printmaking: both poets, though in different ways, employ a kind of negative image making, cutting away all that is
