following paper will deal with the novel "Sunny Memories of Foreign Lands" by Harriet Beecher Stowe which was written in 1854. It has been out of print for several years, which is why it was difficult to find secondary literature.

Consequently, I mostly worked with the book itself, which consists of letters Stowe wrote to friends and family members. They do not include any personal details. It is not clear whether the letters were printed in the original way or if certain details have been left out on purpose. In its preface, written by Harriet Beecher Stowe herself, she says, "If the criticism be made that every thing is given couleur de rose, the answer is, Why not? They are the impressions, as they arose, of a most agreeable visit." In my paper I will try to answer her question "Why not?". During her travels, Stowe encountered mostly friendly people who gave her a warm welcome to Britain. Stowe was, at the time, enjoying great status and fame in Britain due the overwhelming success of her novel“Uncle Tom’s Cabin“.While“Uncle Tom’s Cabin”sold 150.000 copies in the United States during the first year of its publication, it sold over one million times in Great Britain.1Consequently, people who were also anti-slavery oriented, were very pleased to be in her company. Some encounters Stowe describes, remind one of almost popstar-like fame, and it is only normal that such enthusiastic emotions would push her towards looking at everything in a more positive light. Consequently, Stowe's attitude towards the British working class seems a little too "couleur de rose". Being so active in the anti-slavery movement, it is hard to believe that a woman like Stowe with such strong political opinions can be so oblivious to the horrible working conditions in Britain. In this paper, I will start out by mentioning a few facts concerning Stowe's background and upbringing. In order to understand her opinions and especially her religious approach, it is important to take a look at her family and general environment. Furthermore, I will provide a little background information on the letters she wrote and a map to show the different places she visited. In chapter 4 I will work with the letters. I will show what Stowe thought about the British, the differences and similarities she noticed between British and American people. I will point out in depth what Stowe wrote about their outer appearance, their behavior and the immense feeling of comfort Stowe had while in Britain.

Written by her son Charles, this volume tells the story of Harriet Beecher Stowe, including her childhood, early married life, time in poverty, travels and successful writing career. Born in June of 1811, Harriet Beecher Stowe was the seventh of 13 children born to famous Protestant preacher Lyman Beecher. In her early adulthood, Harriet worked alongside her older sister, Catharine, as a teacher. Her earliest published work was a children's geography book penned with her sister's name in 1833. In 1836, she married Calvin Stowe and wrote many articles for religious periodicals while raising her seven children. During this time, she also wrote several volumes of poetry, travel books and children's stories.

Stowe also wrote at least ten novels, of which the most famous is Uncle Tom's Cabin, published in 1852. An extremely controversial work, Stowe became famous after its release. The following year, she would write A Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin in response to critics who refuted the authenticity of the book's stories. She would publish another anti-slavery novel, Dred, in 1856. Just after the start of the American Civil War, Stowe met with President Abraham Lincoln. During this meeting, he famously addressed her as "the little lady who made this big war."

With the opening of the V & A Museum of Design and redevelopment of the waterfront area, Dundee is a city looking confidently to the future but there is also an interesting past just waiting to be rediscovered. Rediscovered Dundee is an anthology of stories from that past. The story of any city is the story of its people and this book features accounts of some Dundonians whose names have been long absent from the history books - such as the boy who attempted a solo crossing of the Atlantic or the man who helped to change our way of death . It investigates some of the physical relics of the past which are still around us but whose stories have been forgotten over time, including the flag that flew at Culloden and the fountain that nobody wanted. There is also the truth about local myths have grown up and have been passed on down the years. Did a Dundee woman really tend to the dying Admiral Nelson and did the heir to the British throne secretly die near Broughty Ferry? With many tourists now visiting Dundee, initially drawn by the V&A, who then find that the city has much more to offer, this book also looks at other visitors through the years. Just as the modern
